“ Beloved "Helen" my former cleaning client and friend, who called me for cleaning help for her beloved husband, "Biggie". It all started there at her house, once a month, I looked forward to her baking biscuit sandwiches for lunch; there was never any refusal of lunch, by her enjoyment at cooking for me. As she explained, "This is the last thing I can do for myself!" She cared deeply in most highest sense for her husband and family, quite evident in her lunch conversations, and the return of love her family had for her. She was the rock of strength for her Biggie, in helping him to pass on, and a conversation of memories of good times with her husband. And then, life as it does, brought forth change, till Helen could no longer do for herself, and came to live with her grand-daughter and her family. I visited her, but I could see from my last visit how she was getting tired easily. I was sorry to hear your strength wore out dear girl. I will miss such a kind, beautiful, loving lady from my life. Rest in Peace and my deepest sympathy and condolences to the family.
