“Eva, Renee, and Marion,
I remember I was staying with you days after the tragic death of my Father in (1984). Bob and Eva were sitting on the big papa-son chair together laughing as we watched a movie. I made the comment I no longer had a father to sit with and laugh with and Bob said, sure you do just call me Dad. Today I remember his kindness but most other days I will remember his orneriness and sense of humor. He always made you laugh. Marion, I remember your kindness during that difficult time for me, you brought a baby hamster to my house as a gift, and I named him Homer.

I believe Renee's hamster just had babies. Eva and Renee both your parents (Bob and Marion) treated me like family as we grew up together, Eva and I best friends since Kindergarten. The loss brings me sadness but is followed by a little envy as because "If we could see him now as he walks the streets of gold" he is truly home with our Lord and Savior, a place we all long to be one day. May he finally find peace and comfort. Love all of you guys! ❤️
